After the story is told the dream book is consulted. If there is any sentence in the whole makeup of the book which has any bearing on the story told by the dreamer it is accepted by the player. The numbers are then copied by the player. Since the war on policy playing is being waged these dreamers have had to look at life more seriously. It is said that some of them have done no other kind of work

An instance of how easily policy players can be deluded into thinking luck is always about them was told by an old-time policy runner. He said that most of his trade was among poor colored people of the West End. Every morning, when he called, they would hunt for a nickel or dime. Many of them, he said, would play the last nickel they possessed. This fellow knew the weakness of the colored race, and one day, when business was not brisk, he thought of an idea to gain more money. He said that he went into a park in his district and cut a number of twigs from a maple tree. These twigs he cut in small pieces about four inches long. Taking them with him, he went among his players and told them that he was in possession of a number of "hoodoo sticks," which had been charmed by a famous medium. The man had about twelve of the sticks when he started out, and it was but a short time when he disposed of all of them for 25 cents

MRS. LENA BUSHFENMANN THOUGHT HER BOY WAS DEAD.

That Same Afternoon, While Skating on the Canal, He Broke Through the Thin Ice.

MOTHER KEPT IN IGNORANCE

WAS THOUGHT THE SHOCK WOULD BE TOO MUCH FOR HER.

Sindlinger-A Long Search for the Body.

The death of Willie Bushfenmann, ten years of age, by drowning yesterday afternoon, followed a few hours after a dream by his mother that she was holding her dead son, dressed in white, in her arms. She told of her dream at the breakfast table yesterday morning. Mrs. Lena Bushfenmann lives at 413 West Michigan street with the family of Peter Sindlinger. Her husband left her several years ago, and she has since been obliged to work for her living and support of her son, whose welfare seemed to be her only thought. Yesterday morning, at the breakfast table, she told the other members of the family that she had dreamed of holding the dead body of her child, dressed in white. in her arms. So real was the dream that she awoke with a start and was unable again to sleep. The thought of the dream affected her visibly during the forenoon, and by midday she was ill. In the afternoon she went to bed.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon three just above the Vermont-street bridge. One of them got too close to the thinner ice near the center of the canal and broke through. The other boys quickly took off their skates and disappeared. A negro driving on Michigan street saw the boy struggling in the water. He whipped up his team and drove down along the west of the canal, and when opposite the helpless boy threw out the lines to him. The boy had twice come to the surface, but the next time did not show his face, and, of course, knew nothing of the effort of the colored man. He went down, and was seen no more until dragged out about two

In a few minutes there were several hundred persons on the bridge and along the canal waiting for the possible appearance of the body of the boy on the water's surface. The police were advised, and Bicycle Policemen Griffin and Manning, with hooks for dragging the canal, were the first to arrive. They could get no information whatever as to the identity of the boy.

SEVERAL NAMES USED. It was reported that it was Willie Buschmann, Willie Bush, and several other names were given. One little girl named Bush, who lived only a short distance away, passed, and upon hearing the name of Bush mentioned concluded that it was her brother who had been drowned. She began weeping, and then walked rapidly around the square several times, crying as if her heart would break. She would not be comforted, and hardly bstened to those who offered what consolation they could. Several mothers whose sons had habitually skated on the canal appeared, and each, after looking for her child, became possessed with the idea that it must be her son who had been drowned. As the work of dragging for the body went on the crowd grew larger, and there were more All were excited, and the crowd followed the police and their assistants from one point of the bridge and the banks of the canal to another, greatly interfering

As nearly as could be learned the boy went through the ice about thirty feet north of the bridge. The canal was dragged first in that part, but the body was not found, and then search was continued to the southward in the direction of the Search was made under the bridge, and then, after dragging some distance below, the hooks were taken to a considerable distance above the bridge. The body was found about seventy-five feet north of the Vermont-street bridge, and had been carried apparently against the current of the water. Undertaker Herman took the body, at the request of Mr. Sindlinger, who acted for Mrs. Bushfenmann, who had been kept in Only a short time before the body was found did the identity of the boy become known. Frank Privitt, ten years of age, In talking with an old policy runner on and living at 622 North California street. told a number of the watchers that he had been with young Bushfenmann when he broke through the ice. He said there was another boy with them, but he did not

-New Schedule Considered. All of the carpenters employed by Conrad Bender have been called off by Business Agent Travis, of the Carpenters' Union, because he is working nonunion men. The men working on a building being erected for the Atlas engine works by Bender were first called off because he was employing men who have been doing all or a greater work, and all of the union men were then withdrawn from him.

The union has decided to lay the matter before the Contractors' Association, but wait upon John A. Schumacher, president of the association, to bring the matter before that body. The union of carpenters

The district council of Carpenters' Unions No. 60 and 281 last night held a session in Carpenters' Hall, but no action was taken on a schedule of rules to be submitted to the Contractors' Association for the coming season. It is understood that a slight increase in wages will be asked. The carpenters last year demanded 35 cents an hour, but compromised for 321/2 cents. Capt. English Says, However, That No Witnesses Will Be Examined-Gaming Must Be Stopped.

Captain English, president of the Board of Safety, has notified Clerk Wood to call a meeting of the board for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. In regard to the purpose of the meeting Captain English said last

"It is the result of a conference between Mayor Bookwalter, Superintendent Taffe and myself. We wish to go over the whole ground of alleged wholesale gambling and to see if we cannot determine upon ways and means to better the present moral status of the town in that regard."

"Will evidence be received as to any of the complaints that certain policy men are being protected?" "There will not," the captain answered "The board is in no position at the present time to receive witnesses on the question No good could be accomplished by that method of procedure." "Does the board intend to call before it any members of the detective or police

We will then issue to the superintendent of police specific orders that gambling in any shape or form must be stopped.' 'What further attitude will the Board of

SOLID SILVERWARE AND JEWELRY TAKEN FROM TWO HOUSES.

Robert M. Hatten and C. A. Lucas the Victims-Other Residents Heard Night Prowlers.

Burglars have been at work in Irvington. Two houses were entered and robbed of considerable valuables on Friday night At the home of Robert McHatten, 350 South Ritter avenue, the most booty was secured. The thieves, who appear to have been experienced hands at the business, gained an entrance into the house by forcing open a cellar window. From the cellar the stairs lead into the kitchen. A swinging door opens into the dining room from the kitchen, so the thieves had no difficulty in entering the dining room and the lower part of the house. They took all of Mrs. Mc Hatten's solid silver ware and some valuable china ware, with a gold watch. The cobbers opened the whole lower floor so that they could make a speedy exit if discovered, but they were so quiet and skilled in their work that none of the family was awakened. Only silver and very valuable hings were desired, as the thieves did not ouch clothing or wrans. The other house entered was the home of Mr. C. A. Lucas, about a square from the

THE IRVINGTON TOWN BOARD DE-FEATS THE ORDINANCE.

Meeting Called by Two Members of the Board.

COMPANY CHANGES ITS NAME

"IRVINGTON WATER COMPANY" IN-CORPORATED LATE IN DAY.

Members Disappointed at the Town's Action-What Councilman Eppert Says of Matter.

Irvington buzzed like a hornet's nest last night when the news became known that certain members of the Town Board, in what was originally intended should be a secret meeting, had attempted to force through the governing body of the town an ordinance giving the "Irvington Water Company" a franchise to establish in the town a water works plant and saddling on Irvington a debt of $47,000.

The news came as a direct surprise for the reason that it was supposed the board was aware of the public sentiment against granting a franchise of any kind until the mooted question of annexation to Indianapolis was settled. It was known that President Frank Davenport and J. W. Elstun, of the board, were strongly in favor of giving the franchise and had talked at length and vigorously in behalf however, evidently thought it best to strike while the iron was hot and believed that the passing of the water works ordinance would dampen whatever ardor Indianapolis councilmen might have for the annexation of the suburb. Consequently, according to Member Layman, they called the meeting without giving public notice, few persons besides the regular board members knowing anything about it.

A DISAPPOINTMENT. The board members mentioned had been confident of success, it was stated, and the voting down of the water-works ordinance was a severe disappointment to them. So confident were the officials of the company asking for the franchise that it would be put through in last night's meeting that they had gone before the secretary of state in the afternoon and changed the name of the company from the "American Water and Light Company" to the "Irvington Water Company," the officers of both being identical and the object exactly the same. It was stated that the incorporation under the new name was made to prevent litigation in further bonding of other enterprises the company might undertake. It was deemed best to give the enterprise "Do you think the police force is doing | "local identity." The "Irvington Water Company," rudely bereft of life by the action of the Town Board last night, was to have been capitalized at $10,000. Its officers and incorporators were Samuel V. Perrott, Henry C. Ulen, jr., Albert G. errott and Harry C. Higgins. With the members of the Town Board of Irvington-President Frank Davenport, J. W. Elstun, Theodore Layman, S. H. Richey and C. J. Ward-these officers met last night. They came jubilantly, expecting successful action on their ordinance. They left downcast, declaring that hereafter the Town Board of Irvington would have to come to them and ask for bids, as they would never again voluntarily submit a bid after the "throw-down" they had re-ceived. Henry C. Ulen, jr., was spokesman for the officers of the company. THE FIGHT STARTED.

President Davenport, releasing the chair in favor of Member Ward, started the fight by announcing that he had a copy of an the town of Irvington. With the proposed the "Irvington Water Company," figures showing in detail the cost of erecting a water works plant. These figures were prepared for the water company by Civil Engineers Jeup, Moore and Minor. These engineers estimated that the cost of putting n seventy-four double discharge hydrants, two tubular wells, two engines and six miles of piping would be $44,155.60. President Davenport, retaining the floor. declared that the proposition of the "Irving ton Water Company" for instituting the plant was very favorable and economical. and should be adopted by the board. He declared also that no other company would touch the improvement at the figures submitted by the "Irvington Water Company." He thought that the proper thing for the Irvington board to do would be to forestall any action the Indianapolis City Council may take to-morrow night by immediately voting the franchise. Mr. Davenport said that there was no doubt that the Indianapolis Council intended to annex Irvington o-morrow night and the only way for Irvington to get a water plant was to accept the present opportunity. If the town were annexed he said it would be six or seven years before Irvington would get any atention from Indianapolis. C. J. Ward, member of the board, said hat while he was opposed at this time to the annexation of Irvington by Indianapolis he emphatically did not think it was right to attempt to railroad through an ordinance of the kind proposed, and to saddle a debt on the town. He came out flatly and said he would support no measure of the kind. He did not think that his duty to the citizens of Irvington would justify him in voting for such a franchise.

REFUSED THEIR SANCTION. The other two members of the board who helped kill the ordinance, Theodore Layman and S. H. Richey, simply refused to give their sanction to the ordinance favored by Mr. Davenport and Mr. Elstun. The final vote on the ordinance was three against two. Feeling of the most intense kind was manifested by the members of McHatten residence. There the robbers the board while the speeches were being made and the vote recorded. Several speakers controlled their voices with difficulty. H. C. Ulen, ir., when he asked for the bundle of papers and specifications that have been to throw open all the doors | had been prepared by the company with so much trouble, said that he had no doubt treat. The robbers were disturbed in their the majority of the board members had work by Mr. Lucas, who came down stairs | acted conscientiously; but he intimated strongly that they need not come to his company in the future for favors.

It was stated last night that the action of President Davenport in calling a meetwhich was hidden in the front room, was ing of the board for the purpose of conoverlooked. Remains of some pies were sidering the water works franchise was unlooked for. Enemies of the annexation movement say that it was a clever attempt morning lunch. Mrs. Lucas's mother, who to stave off crucial action, but that the sleeps down stairs, thinks that she was move will result in something exactly opdrugged. It was decided then that "Meridian street is to be the dividing line between the Second Church and the one about to be formed, and that all residing west of Meridian street be requested to remain in the Second Church, and all residing east of Meridian street be requested to go into the new church." The division was amicable. The new church first met in Concert Hall, the upper floor of a three-story brick building at the southwest corner of Washington and Pennsylvania streets. The church's first building was on Samuel Merrill's property, near Merrill and Alabama streets. Mr. Merrill, who was the father of Col Samuel Merrill, paid for the building. It was moved sometime afterward to Maryland street and Virginia avenue, and was given up when the congregation entered its new brick building at the southwest corner of Market and Delaware streets, in 1852. This property was sold after twenty years and the congregation met in the Central Christian Church, at Ohio and Delaware streets. Another building was erected on Pratt street, near Pennsylvania. Ten years ago a building on Delaware street, near Eighteenth, became the church's home. After two years the present building, at Alabama and Nineteenth streets, was
